

$100,000 JEWEL THEFT IN GOTHAM

Daring Band Loot Big Store Under Cover of Fire; Employes Suspected.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Under cover of a fire which broke out in the jewelry store of the establishment of T. J. & H. Sullivan, No. 574 Fifth avenue, last night, a band of thieves stole a $100,000 jewel.

The mystery and the manner of the theft were probably the most daring of the kind which has been known in New York. The thieves, who were believed to be a band of five or six, entered the store at about 11 o'clock, and, after a brief search, they found the jewels. They then fled, leaving the store in a state of confusion.

RUSH $500 TRIPLE THE SOLUTIONS

Contestants in Mystery Story Contest Have Until Thursday Noon. PRIZES WORTH THE WORK

By A. H. C. MITCHELL, Author of "The Triple Tie". It is now up to the readers of the AMERICAN who have been reading "The Triple Tie" to solve the problems of the story and send in their solutions to competition for the prizes amounting to $500, offered by this newspaper.

In this issue of the AMERICAN is printed Chapter 43 of "The Triple Tie". It is the end of this chapter which Harry is brought to the scene again. There he is left while the readers of the story send their contributions to the AMERICAN.

Readers will be allowed until noon of Thursday in which to send in their answers. No communication will be considered unless it is received at the AMERICAN office by Thursday at noon, or bear a postmark not later than that time.

The final chapter of "The Triple Tie" as written by the author will be printed in next Monday's AMERICAN.

As an aid to the readers who desire to compete for the prize it may be said that the problem to be solved are these: First, How did Gordon King escape from the mountain? Second, What happened to King after he escaped?

Third, How did Gordon King, who never saw a game of baseball and never played a game of baseball up to the time he escaped, manage to hit the Atlanta club for a position on the team, later to catch a ball and hit in the phenomenal manner he showed in the game he played at Atlanta?

Fourth, What happened when Gordon King went to the hotel in the half of the night which is the first and deciding chapter of the story, where there were three boys, two of whom were not the King but were?

Fifth, What is the final ending of the story?

It is suggested that readers who desire to compete for the prize, take up the narrative where it leaves off in this issue of the AMERICAN and complete it as they think it ought to be completed, or as they think the author has completed it, thus solving the problems presented.

Every novel is a mystery, else no one would read a novel. Speculation as to how a story will turn out is usually what keeps a reader interested in the end. Perhaps the mystery of "The Triple Tie" is no more mysterious than any to be found in the average novel. Certainly everybody who has read "The Triple Tie" from the beginning has an idea as to how things "turned out".

It may be shown that the author has solved the problems in a rational way, that there is nothing impossible in the author's solving of the story.

Please remember that this story is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and accurate knowledge will be largely considered in awarding the prize. Three prizes, in no way connected with the AMERICAN, will make the awards for the best solution of "The Triple Tie" problem.

So go to it, readers. You have until noon of Thursday to send in your contributions.

"Stick to the Old Gospel!" Says Deacon

"I believe in the story of Adam and Eve in the Bible, that Jacob was found after in the lion den and that Daniel was found in the lion's den."

So says Deacon D. M. Wentworth, who has just completed fifty years as deacon of Tremont Temple and is eighty years of age, and has been married every one to stick to the old Bible truths. He says:

"Don't be carried away with these new notions about the Bible. Stick to the old gospel. It can't be improved upon. I would advise every young man to get into touch with some church. That's the way I began and I have not regretted it."

We Have Used Our Big Buying Power With Telling Effect

We've planned for the greatest month of selling ever recorded by any Boston store, and we're going to have it. We sent more than 3,000 letters (like the one printed in the center of this advertisement) to representative business houses in every part of this broad land. We can show here only a few of the answers, but they tell in stronger words than we can print of the immense purchase we have made, and of the unexampled low prices we have paid. We've bought, bought, bought, and we're going to pass the savings along to you in a sale, the like of which you or anyone else has never known.

SPARE TALKS ON NATIONAL ROADS

Former Head of A. A. A. Declares
Uncle Sam Should Adopt French System.

"If France will allow the use of the road and the French system of road building, the American people will be able to build a better road system than they have now," declared E. S. Jordan, former head of the American Automobile Association, in a speech before the National Road Building Association at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria last night.

Mr. Jordan, who is now in charge of the American Automobile Association, declared that the French system of road building is the best in the world. He said that the French system is based on the principle of building a road for the use of the people, and not for the use of the government. He said that the French system is based on the principle of building a road for the use of the people, and not for the use of the government.

Talks on Tires Breaker Strips

By P. W. LITCHFIELD.

Pat. W. Litchfield, of the Litchfield Tire and Rubber Co., of New York, was the speaker at the meeting of the National Road Building Association at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria last night. He spoke on the subject of "Tires and Breaker Strips."

Mr. Litchfield declared that the best tires for use on roads are those that have a breaker strip. He said that the breaker strip is a strip of rubber that is placed on the tread of the tire. He said that the breaker strip is placed on the tread of the tire to break up the road surface and to prevent the tire from slipping.

NON-SKID TIRES

—Endure and Endureless. "Toughness of tread, and extra thick high-quality building, have made them the standard for mileage obtained. Road-gripping design of buoyant rubber tread reduces skidding and increases traction and prevents expensive repairs to car mechanism."

FARMER-DESIGNED FOR PRESIDENT?

E. S. Jordan Has Pronounced Ideas on the Subject.

A new idea in motor car advertising originated by the man who first declared that the motor car was to be a means of transport for the farmer, is being put into effect by E. S. Jordan, former head of the American Automobile Association.

Mr. Jordan, who is now in charge of the American Automobile Association, declared that the motor car is the best means of transport for the farmer. He said that the motor car is the best means of transport for the farmer because it is so easy to use and so comfortable.

Want Yankee Cars with German Label

Overland Co. Nip Chemists to Put
"Made in Germany" on Their Autos.

Overland Co. Nip Chemists, of New York, are planning to put the words "Made in Germany" on their automobiles. They said that they are doing this because they want to sell more cars in Germany. They said that they are doing this because they want to sell more cars in Germany.

Forty-eight entries have been received for the Transatlantic road race to be run on July 4 from Los Angeles to San Francisco. This showing breaks all records and stamps the contest as one of the biggest racing events of the year.

Has the Horse a "Ghost" of a Show?

This Advertisement Is Addressed to Men Who Want to Save Money—Shows How to Do It.

The country's best experts on Street Transportation have tied the horse to the tailboard of the Electric Truck.

The large Express Companies, whose chief business is transportation, after many years of careful experiment, are clearing out their stables for good and all. The horse is only one of many proved instances of dollars saved.

The American National Express Companies now have 42 Electric Wagons in use in Boston, with more on order.

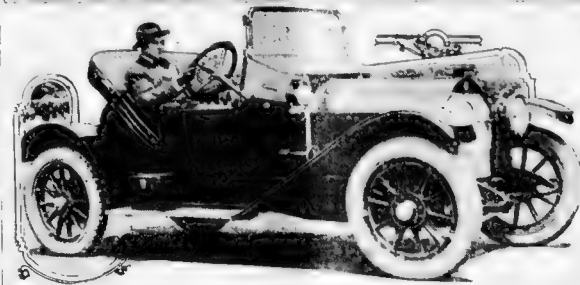

The Boston Edison Company has just ordered 22 more Electric Trucks, including eleven (11) 2-ton trucks.

Here is the Big List of Manufacturers and Dealers to Choose from. Ask them. Every day you stick to Horse Trucking you are throwing money away that might be going into the bank.

Vitalized Rubber in Diamond Tires means MORE mileage for LESS money

The amount you pay for tires and the miles you get depend upon your judgment in buying tires.

Our Chemists have discovered a process which toughens the pure rubber, giving it additional strength and elasticity—and Diamond "More Mileage" Tires made of Vitalized Rubber cost you no more.

Diamond (No Clinch) Tires

More Mileage for Less Money

Diamond Tires are giving maximum mileage at minimum expense—they are making good in actual service.

The name "Diamond" insures you getting a tough, elastic, wear-resisting tread, as well as a side wall that will not break above the head—and a no-clinch construction that prevents rim cutting.

So this time buy Diamond Vitalized Rubber Tires—you can get them to fit your rims from

PLYMOUTH WORK FOR SUMMER MONTHS
PLYMOUTH WELL-MANAGED POULTRY YARD

By MICHAEL K. BOYER,

Consider, this, by a famous Michigan poultryman, a particularly gratifying belief, summer work in the poultry yard. There is much to be done during the hot season, and much which, if left undone, would cause trouble. The work is not a new thing, but its importance is so great that to neglect it will spell failure for the enterprise.

The summer should be collected regularly each day. After feeding and watering the stock the attendant can visit the yard, taking with him a dust and a short-handled broom or scraper, with which he can remove the droppings in the pen. This, however, should be followed by applying a light coating of sifted coal ash, or fine dust, or some other similar material, on the dropping boards to prevent the manure adhering.

Once a week there should be a general cleaning up of the yard. In this work, the droppings should be removed and the dropping boards carefully washed. Work of this nature, if carefully performed, will insure a healthy stock.

Quantity of Feeding.

The quantity of feed to be given is a question of feed and the manner in which the feed is given. While there is a very little to be said for the special feeding of the summer, it is a fact that the quantity of feed should be increased during the summer months.

benefit of a children's ward in the Latin Hospital and the Women's Industrial Laundry and also on several other objects and most successful affair ever given in town, and Mrs. Elliott, who has worked so long and so hard for the success of the affair, to say nothing of the many girls in being engaged upon it.

Mrs. Elliott herself in the children's ward was just promoted when, upon visiting the hospital one day, she found four babies with broken hips in the bathroom, simply because there was no room for them elsewhere. Right then and there the idea of having a fund for these little sufferers came to her mind, and in order to bring it to the attention of a wider circle, as well as to raise money, she decided to give a small fete for the benefit of a new ward. It was from this idea of a "small affair" that the fete of Wednesday grew. By 10 o'clock the response to Mrs. Elliott's call for all that more ladies for the bridge were in demand than her first plans could have increased the number of ladies and hours sitting over it. As the evening wore on many things were suggested that the affair should go beyond Mrs. Elliott's board, and all her friends rushed to her aid; consequently the wonderful fete of Wednesday and is a great success.

The affair was a most delightful one, and was a great success. The ladies were seated over a fine buffet table to be found. Every thing was below cost and unwilling to say the girls did a rushing business.

From About Casco Bay

With the closing days of June the life of summer visitors to the Old Orchard is in full swing. The harbor is a scene of activity and the pace is lively.

The sports men of the harbor are busy with their fishing. The water is full of fish and the catch is good.

Recently a syndicate headed by John W. Foster of Lawrence purchased the Old Orchard and the surrounding land. The syndicate is planning to develop the area into a large resort.

The big cause of the excitement at Old Orchard is the new hotel. The hotel is a large and modern building and is expected to be a great success.

C. H. Campbell, proprietor of the hotel, says that the hotel will be a great success. He expects to have a large number of guests.

William B. Dobbin, proprietor of the hotel, says that the hotel will be a great success. He expects to have a large number of guests.

Fol-de-Rol from the Follies of 1913

Laughs Scored by Frank Tinney, Jose Collins, Martin Brown and Leon Errol.

OP—So you are Mr. Satan? What do you mean by hanging around New York?

MARTIN—Oh, I feel more at home in New York than in any other town. Besides, I have an important mission here. I am here on a business trip.

COP—What's the idea?
MARTIN—I want to introduce the afternoon dancing tea down below. It beats anything we've got there for temptation.

JOSE—Good evening! I've been looking all around for you. They've just closed the cabaret and I'm all alone.

MARTIN—All alone in this town at this hour of the night?
JOSE—Why, is there anything wrong for a girl to be in New York alone?

MARTIN—No, but it's pretty hard.
JOSE—I'm looking for happiness.

MARTIN—Looking for happiness in Bryant Park at quarter of one in the morning?
JOSE—Well, now that they close the cabarets at 1 o'clock, I just don't know what to do with my evenings.

MARTIN—Officer, where are you going with all those balloons?
COP—They're pinched for doing the Turkey Trot in a Turkish bath.

JOSE—I think it's terrible. No turkey trot, no tango, no bunny—all I can do is to go home and do the grizzly with my husband. And he can't bear it either.

MARTIN—Well, there's the dancing tea waitress.

JOSE—Yes, and as long as sleeping is mostly a habit, I guess I'll swear off sleep and go to those. Even the musical comedies are dying.

MARTIN—What is a musical comedy?

JOSE—A musical comedy is a disease that breaks out on Broadway and kills 'em dead in Oklahoma. It is infected with chorus girls—

MARTIN—And what is a chorus girl?
JOSE—A chorus girl is a string of beads and a little mermaid getting together a few human curves. She always owns a few Johnnies.

MARTIN—Johnnies?
JOSE—Yes, a stage-door Johnny is a fellow who acts like a man and talks like a cash register.

COP—Come along, now. I've got to arrest you for a drink in the park.
LEON (crying)—I was only drinking in the park.

COP—Don't hand me that. You can hardly stand up now.
LEON—That's because I'm tired—only tired. If you want to arrest me you'll have to call a taxi.

COP—You walk along to the station or I'll beat you up.
LEON—Beat me up to the station? Good idea. You walk ahead. We'll have a race, and I'll bet on you to get there first. Oh, it's too hot to get arrested, anyhow.

COP—Look here, do you want to get me in bad?
LEON—It can't be done. You New York cops are in as bad as you can get. Got a little drink on you?

COP—Not a thing.
LEON—No, even a little Worcestershire?

COP—No.
LEON—Well, we'd better move along then. I've got to go to the station and on the way to the station you can drop me off at my time.

COP—All right. We'll do that.
LEON—I know how to work 'em. I was a police officer for seven years. I kept it quiet, though. Nobody knew about it. It was a secret.

JOSE—What's the matter? Has your great secret leaked out because I have been hopping up Fifth Avenue on horseback?
LEON—What's the charge?

JOSE—Warning the chauffeurs. All I did was to jump my horse across the street. Never touched one of them.

LEON—Where were you going?
JOSE—For my home in New Rochelle.

LEON—You ought to be arrested for going there. I lived up there near a year.

JOSE—I guess that picture of the girl is doing it to you.
LEON—Yes. What's the name of it?

JOSE—The name of it is 'The Girl'.
LEON—Must be waiting for somebody to bring her a union bug.

JOSE—Did you think it beautiful?
LEON—Yes, but she might have picked out a dumber fiver. FRANK (crying): Hey, you! What're you doing in this here subway station. You're drunk, you are.

LEON—I want to go some place from here. Got any nice places to go?
FRANK—Sure. Lots of 'em. Got fifty-two places. Don't you know where to go? I'll tell you. I'll tell you. Now you can go to the station.

LEON—No, you pick. Pick me out an odd number.
FRANK—You can go to the station. I'll tell you. I'll tell you.

LEON—No, you pick. I'll tell you. I'll tell you.
FRANK—You can go to the station. I'll tell you. I'll tell you.

LEON—No, you pick. I'll tell you. I'll tell you.

North End C. C. Beat Dorchester All-Star

The North End Catholic Club defeated the Dorchester All-Stars in a gruelling contest at the Everett Square playground yesterday, 5 to 4. The feature of the game was the fine pitching of Sands who made sixteen strike outs and allowed but three hits. Poor fielding was the cause of most of the runs made for Dorchester.

Torresella and Gentile excelled for the Catholic Club.

COMFORT

This glimpse into the Lozier "LIGHT SIX" touring car gives you just a hint of the luxury of Lozier comfort. Soft, thick cushions do not insure comfort. But in the Lozier there are one of many contributing comfort factors. Such comfort as Lozier comfort cannot be found with all other Lozier qualities—mechanical precision, power, extra strength—in any but a Lozier car. That is why more men who know automobiles, and who can afford to take advantage of their knowledge, own Loziers. And for the same reason, more and more such men are buying Loziers.

Adams Company, New York, N. Y.

There will be no more living in the dull low level valleys and plains. The tops of the hills and the sides of the mountains will be the homes of the great-great-grandchildren of the greater race of men that will live on East and the South, around the top of some big hill or lofty mountain, as they are now the homes of the eagles and of the other noble animals.

 When man goes back to the hills, he will end back to his old home.
 If man go out and buy it. You can buy mountain tops cheap now.
 It need go out and buy it. You can buy mountain tops cheap now.
 the air shall have been fully consumed and all the travel will be without trails or wheels or noise or friction.
 the mountains and on the hills when the air shall have been fully consumed and all the travel will be without trails or wheels or noise or friction.
 globe's curving surface planet will begin
 It has not begun yet. There Glorious will be the minds of men when they shall have lived upon the mountains for ages (till as the nothing real, nothing human in the realm above the animal in the mountains, they will have peace, and thus real HUMAN life, the back to the lands where he lived in the babyhood on this earth Except on old northern countries, the early men could live only on the hills

You can buy for little the big mountain called Mount Desert
Some day it will be worth more than the rest of the island upon which Bar Harbor stands.

The mountains shall bring peace to the people, and the little mountains live now in poverty, in dread, the victims of Nature's power and brutality! In glory, in wealth and in independence

The old Psalmist looked far ahead when he wrote the words at the top of this page

Science will make man independent of those steep hills, he will go to living above them, and will be stronger, happier, freer, competent to struggle against, laurel, conquest, triumph, disappointment and premature death

In the valleys, the towlards, nature and the power of violent forwere too strong for man. He could not compete with the weeds, the bushes, the trees in the days when You can buy the high, steep hills of the Cuculla, the Alder Hills and along the Hudson River for pennies, by rightness, BECAUSE THEY WILL BE THE HOMES OF MEN IN BETTER, NOBLER days
 Go buy one, and keep it—your hill

he had no use of iron or steel
 So he lived on the hills, and made his little terraces to hold back the soil that the run might not wash it and uncorroborated evidence that return to this earth time after time was borne that the

 will be true; NOT THE SLAVE
 OF NATURE
 We can now forward to a time when works of art, the intensive cultivation of the earth by machinery.
 free man
 The prisoner comes out blinking into light, in mind. He has been hemmed in by walls, being a dreadful life of monotony.
 As the prisoner, and the great man on the tops and the sides of the mountains and hills, no longer want on the flat ground.
 The same client will go to his business or his vacation from the own front yard, and the great man will go on the mountain tops. They will find these mountain tops not so easy, painful climbing as in the past, but as the single peak. FLYING.
 For man after conquering the earth, and conquering the water in new about to conquer the air.

When babies living are old men they will find it hard to believe that they would have ever existed in a LIVING MACHINE.

Have you bought for your great-solid across this country, away to our mountains and the hills, have found peace "BY RIGHTEOUS-

Whether disappointments may have overtaken the managers in the season of just ended, there are fair grounds for belief that the forthcoming season will be a more successful one. There are indications that the managers are not only better informed as to the tastes of the audience, but also that they are more alert in their selection of plays. The season of just ended was a very successful one, and the managers are now better informed as to the tastes of the audience. It is not always easy to make predictions too far in advance, but it looks as if the big hit of the coming season will be "The Whirlwind," which will be played at the Plymouth Theatre. The play is a comedy, and it is expected to be a great success. The managers are now better informed as to the tastes of the audience, and they are more alert in their selection of plays. The season of just ended was a very successful one, and the managers are now better informed as to the tastes of the audience.

One of the early arrivals at the Park will be "The Great Breaker," a comedy in three acts. The play is a comedy, and it is expected to be a great success. The managers are now better informed as to the tastes of the audience, and they are more alert in their selection of plays. The season of just ended was a very successful one, and the managers are now better informed as to the tastes of the audience.

common substances found in meteorites; it is believed that the meteorites are composed of the same materials as the earth. Inasmuch as many meteorites fall to earth, it is not unusual that this cosmic dust, or rather the meteoric matter, should be found on earth and so scatters down, some directly to the earth and some to clouds and brought down by rain.

No doubt this dust is all over the earth, but it is believed that it is not so easy to find it on bare ground. On the snow-covered Greenland it is safe to assume that this dust is everywhere. It is not so easy to find a little might come from earth to clouds and be blown back to earth, but it is not so easy to find which the meteorite showers are of cosmic matter proves that clouds get dust from the earth.

Among the constituents of dust floating in the air are iron, nickel, cobalt, copper, silver, lithium, indium, thallium, nickel, manganese, and so forth. Many of these can be traced to the earth, but it is not so easy to find them in dust from clouds, collected either by itself or by rain. It is not so easy to find them in rain, but it is not so easy to find them in rain. It is not so easy to find them in rain, but it is not so easy to find them in rain.

WHY CRIMES DO NOT FAIL

The Burglar Who Robs Your Home--

No. 13 of a Series of Remarkable Revelations Written

By SOPHIE LYONS

The Most Famous and Successful Criminal of Modern Times, Who Made a Million Dollars in Her Early Criminal Career and Lost It at Monte Carlo, and Has Now Accumulated Half a Million Dollars in Honorable Business Enterprises.

Sophie Lyons.

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

Only once a year I find among his lot a lot of articles of little or no intrinsic value, but worth possibly thousands of dollars to their owner. Such articles, if disposed of in the regular way, to a "house" or professional receiver of stolen property would often net but small returns, whereas the same articles if "worked back" to the owners through careful negotiation might bring thousands of dollars.

Because of my ability in "working back" articles in this manner my services were frequently called by professional housebreakers in years gone by. In this way I came to know many of the most notorious of them quite intimately. Then, too, I was on several jobs myself.

Presented an exception to the general rule that "crime does not fail." I think, therefore, that I would be as good a position as any one to testify to it.

As a matter of fact, throughout all my experience in the underworld the conclusion was continually being forced upon me that a life of crime cannot pay and that the housebreaker, however successful he may prove for a while, is bound to, sooner or later, fail.

The truth is that the master is the housebreaker, like every other profession at all criminal, is an inveterate gambler. When he is in funds he squanders his money, and when he is out he is in a "job" after another scheme to go wrong, he has nothing to fall back on. For weeks at a time even the most successful burglars have found it hard work to secure three meals a day. During such periods they had the existence of one cent.

But even when the burglar is not harassed by actual need, there are many other things to worry him. The fear of arrest is constantly in his mind. He is a hunted man. It is a fact that some burglars are occasionally stricken with remorse for some of their crimes, and even in the cases I speak of today present an instance of this. Then, too, the burglar is constantly jeopardizing his life and liberty in pursuit of his dangerous vocation. The housebreaker has no hesitancy in rhyming to tell when he comes upon a fat intruder, and the burglar carries his life in his hands.

Even still, money is in his pocket, there, the professional housebreaker is constantly asking himself the question "Does it pay?" Is the same worth the can't and from what I know of the crime I feel warranted in saying that it does not. It is a fact that the burglar in the end of ten years is in the next to CRIME DOES NOT PAY.

Kelley had of the interior of that house been a dining room in which the master and mistress of the house and their three guests, who had entered at different times during the afternoon and had not departed, were seated around a well-lit table. A kitchen in which the servants were dividing their attention between serving the family meal and eating their own, and an entirely unoccupied upper part of the house completely at his mercy. It was late November and quite dark. With the agility of a cat Kelley eluded up the front of the house and made a speedy entrance through one of the second-story windows. Although he was on his feet every second of the time Kelley felt absolutely secure. Downstairs he could hear the rattle of the dinner things and the conversation of the company, but the silence of the front region in the upper floor. He could almost hear his own footsteps, although his feet were clad in slippers of lamb's wool.

Kelley quickly found his way to the wife's bedroom. He ransacked the bureau and dressing table, picking up few trinkets here and there, but the loot he was principally interested in was nowhere to be found.

There was a small room immediately adjoining this bedroom. Kelley decided to explore it.

He opened the door slowly to guard against possible squeaking. The door yielded easily. As he entered the room he observed that it was fitted as a bedroom. It was dark and the lights had not been turned on. Kelley flashed his lamp around the room and as the beam of light swept across the bed he discerned in it the startled features of a woman.

Her glazed eyes were staring straight at him, her countenance horribly contorted with fear. A chill went through Kelley's heart. In a moment he regained his courage. "Arrested," he said, "and I will not harm you."

The woman was absolutely paralyzed. It was with this observation of the housebreaker that she was a chronic invalid. Perhaps she had occupied that bed for many months. Kelley's observation of the housebreaker that she was a chronic invalid. Perhaps she had occupied that bed for many months.

He realized that the woman was now suffering from a severe nervous shock, and as long as she remained in that state he was in no danger, but at any moment the action might come and then, despite his threats, she would scream. It was his duty to keep her in check. A heavy search of the room revealed a small box. Kelley asked the invalid for the combination. She was too frightened to answer. The burglar decided to open the safe with his tools. He was engaged in finding the proper implement when he heard a sudden footstep.

Assuming that it was a servant bringing the invalid's supper, Kelley turned to the door.

"If anybody says 'on your door,' he come mankind threateningly, 'tell them to go away. You don't want to be disturbed. You understand?'"

The woman answered feebly in the affirmative.

The steps were nearing the door. Kelley seized his knife and slipped it into the pocket of his coat.

The sick woman cleared her throat and then in a weak throaty voice repeated the words Kelley had commanded her to say. Kelley pocketed his pistol as he heard the steps retreating.

He turned the key back and also the handle to the lock. In the course of the operation he learned that the invalid room recovered from the shock she had sustained and did a couple of months later. But the shock which Kelley himself sustained when he discovered the woman in that bed thoroughly belittled was an unexpected room as uninvolved him that it was months before he had courage to return to his normal condition, and he was constantly stricken with remorse after when he realized that the "job" had cost the invalid's life. In a fit of melancholia, two years later, he shot himself.

One of the biggest house robberies in which I ever figured took place in New York many years ago in the mansion of a New York millionaire. It was during the wedding ceremony of his daughter, and consisted of a large portion of the wedding presents. It was a very profitable job.

The marriage ceremony was performed on the first floor and was attended by prominent people from all over the world. Kelley was on the second floor, and the wedding presents were displayed. There was over a million dollars worth of them. Kelley was in the room when the wedding ceremony was taking place. He was constantly under the eye of the detectives. The place looked like a jeweler's shop.

While the wedding ceremony was going on, one of the waiters suggested to the detective on guard on the second floor that if he wanted to join the other detectives and house attendants who were relieving the duty on the second floor, he, the waiter, would watch the jewelry till the detective got back. The detective declined to avail himself of the waiter's offer but proved less circumspect when the waiter appeared a few moments later with a host of diamonds.

"If you won't join the rest of us downstairs," he said, "you might as well have 'em here." Under the influence of the detective the waiter soon proved more reliable and the waiter had no difficulty in getting him to leave the room for a short time or two on some simple pretext.

That short period of time was sufficient to enable two of our gang both able secondary men to make their way into the room, out of the glass of one of the cases I seize every piece of jewelry available in a moment they were gone.

The detective was still in the corridor talking to the waiter, when one of the second floor where the wedding presents were displayed in several large glass cases. It was the work of only a few minutes to open the cases and fill a bag with valuable pieces of jewelry and cold gold and silverware."

Ryan was responsible for my taking up this class of work. He was an expert at it and convinced me that I was wasting my time in other forms of crime. We went to Indianapolis where there was an experience which made me regret my decision to join forces with this daring criminal.

"Doc" had a main successful entrance into a large mansion and was towing a large trunk out of the window to me. Jewelry and other small articles of value he put into a cloth bag which he carried, but the big things he threw out to me and I industriously packed them into suitcases.

Suddenly "Doc" discovered. Shots were fired at him and it was only by the merest luck that he managed to get away with his life. We fled in different directions, I abandoning a large part of the loot I had collected.

Later in the evening when I met "Doc" and asked him where my share of the stolen jewelry was, he said, he had buried it in an old barn. I invited upon going with him that very night and despite it up, as I was anxious to see just how much the evening's exciting adventure was going to net us. To my disgust I found that the jewelry, which we had obtained at so much risk, was not worth five hundred dollars, and disposed of in the way we would have to get rid of it would net us much less.

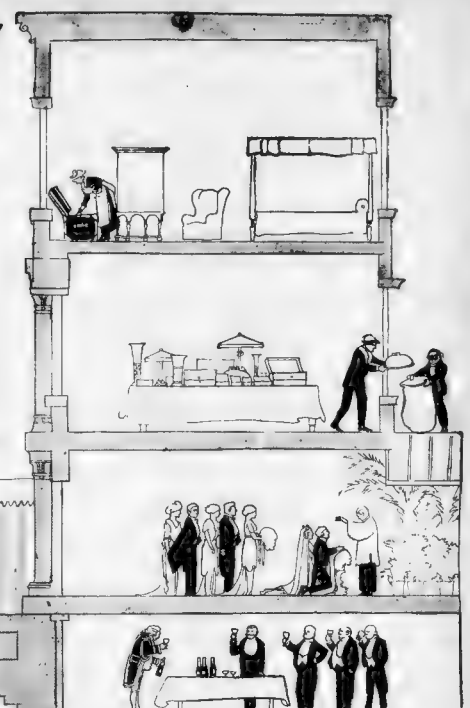

I then decided that this robbery was too much risk and too little profit in this line of work, and except in one or two rare instances where big risks were definitely assured, I kept away from it ever afterward.

Some years afterward I met "Doc" Ryan on the Pacific Coast. He had kept to second-story work and had made many rich hauls. I was in a disaster, probably in a school or householders he was robbing and he had served several prison terms.

When I met him he was old and feeble and was peddling tooth paste in the streets. This man, who had cleaned up many fortunes in his time, had to support himself in his old age by begging in the street.

My life of crime has brought me nothing but sorrow," he complained. "In prison and out of it my experiences have convinced me that honesty is the best policy after all. It is better to be an honest beggar than a wealthy crook!"

I and I know "Doc" Ryan was right. SOPHIE LYONS.

"While the detectives were making merry over their champagne in the basement, two able secondary men made their way to the room on the second floor where the wedding presents were displayed in several large glass cases. It was the work of only a few minutes to open the cases and fill a bag with valuable pieces of jewelry and cold gold and silverware."

The burglar flashed his dark lantern around the room and as his rays swept across the bed he beheld in it a woman's pallid face. Her glazed eyes were staring straight at him, her features were horribly contorted—she was all but paralyzed with fear."

What the Stars Predict for July

THE month of July will be ruled by Mars asserting his horizon with the luminaries in favorable aspect and Jupiter benedictly in the zenith. This foreshadows a brilliant epoch among the laboring classes, with a strong probability of riot and bloodshed.

The coming month will, on the other hand, be generally favorable for all rulers. Several acts of President Wilson and Governors of Eastern States will meet with strong popular approval. Foreign affairs will, however, give the national government good cause for worry, owing to the rising influence of Saturn in our ruling sign, of which Japan is fully aware and of which she will be quick to take advantage. There are some of the things which will make July an eventful month.

July 23—Excitement in the financial world, with heavy outflow of securities; a marine casualty will be reported.

July 2—The stock market in a reactionary condition; failure of an important business house; severe earthquakes.

July 12—A very favorable period; look for rising values in the stock market; in Washington appropriations for national defense will be made and an important foreign treaty facilitated; a labor problem in the public eye.

July 14—A change to cooler temperature; an important social function and the announcement of a marriage engagement will interest the mart set; stocks continue to advance.

July 18—Destructive rains in the Southwest and along the coast; a fall in stocks, due to disturbing Government reports and the burning of a huge financial bubble; coroners.

July 20—With these dates July enters upon a tempestuous period. A great social scandal, death of a woman prominent in the theatrical world, and surprising revelations concerning prisons and other public institutions are promised.

July 23—A great disaster, probably in a school or amusement building; the Cabinet worried by a strained diplomatic situation and Congress in a belligerent mood; loss of life in a railway accident and heavy damage to property by electric storms.

The good offices of Jupiter, July is a very favorable month for those born in the first week of January, March, May, September or November of any year. Such persons will be marked by happy assurances, if you were born in May of any year. Be careful not to take cold, for the transit of Mars over our Sun threatens throat trouble.

If you were born in the first three weeks of June you may expect to receive presents and pleasant offers during July.

A Royal Raker Progress—Even Faster Than King Leopold's

Madame Auffmordt, Otherwise Countess de Salvette, the Beautiful Society Woman at Present the Principal Object of the Fickle Duke's Devotion.

Brussels, June 20.
NEW disgrace has crowned the career of Europe's uncrowned royal rake, the Duke of Orleans.

His wife, the former Archduchess Maria Dorothea of Austria, has sued him for a separation and an accounting for her property, most of which he has squandered on worthless parasites. Such a proceeding by a Catholic Princess is almost unheard of, and proves the outrageousness of the Duke's conduct.

His Highness is the royalist pretender to the throne of France, the head of the French Bourbons. His great-grandfather was King Louis Philippe of France, and his great-great-grandfather was the Duke of Orleans, who voted for the execution of his own cousin, King Louis XVI, in the French Revolution. Although without a throne the Duke is the head of the most historic royal house in the world.

The Duke is now living near Brussels, having made England and other countries too warm for him. He trained at Brussels under the guidance of the late King Leopold, and has already surpassed the wicked doing of that monarch in many ways. Although he is not charged with the crimes of Leopold, he has far outstripped him in extravagance, riotous living, shameless public exhibition of himself with parasites of both sexes and general sensual profligacy.

Orleans prides himself greatly on his resemblance to his famous ancestor, Henri Quatre, the hero of Marcellus's lines:
"Look where you see my white plume
Shine amid the ranks of war,
And be your ordinance to-day
The emblem of Navarre."

Henry of Navarre was not more distinguished in war than for his generosity to his many fair favorites. The Duke of Orleans has never distinguished himself in war and is never likely to, but in the other matter he has beaten his famous ancestor.

Like Henry of Navarre he has a long nose, a high, full cheekbone and a singularly sensual expression of face. In order to lighten the resemblance the Duke trims his hair and whiskers in exactly the same manner as his illustrious forbear, and spends hours at this recreation surrounded by buns and portraits of the old King.

When he was a very young man the Duke was intensely devoted to

Mme. Melba, the noted operatic singer. She suggested to him a way of making himself a hero in France. There is a law forbidding a pretender to the throne or his direct heir to reside in France. The Duke went to a provincial town under an assumed name and declared that he had come to perform his regular military service. He was accepted by the local officers, but in about twenty-four hours they discovered who he was.

He was put under arrest, but the Government felt embarrassed for it was an awkward thing to imprison a young man for trying to do his duty to his country. That was just what he and his royalist friends expected. Their newspapers began to print lurid articles about the shame of keeping the young Prince in a vile dungeon for the crime of trying to serve his beloved Fatherland.

Sympathetic Mme. Melba went to see him in his dungeon. The crafty French Prince Minister noted this.

and he said to the officer in charge of the Duke.

He came to that young man and saw his friend as often as he liked. There is even no hint of his going quietly in the evening.

The Duke seized the opportunity to escape. Just as he followed, he was preparing to shoot their bullet over the sufferings he was in the country, escorted and protected by Mme. Melba.

It was over this, however, that the Duke's devotion to Mme. Melba was a most unusual thing, although it did not interfere with his other affairs. His behavior led to the breaking of his engagement to his cousin, Princess Marie, of Orleans, daughter of the Duke of Chartres. This was arranged for him by his family, and considered a very suitable match, but even French royalists could not force a young Princess to marry a man who behaved like the Duke.

A few years later he married his distant cousin, the Archduchess Maria Dorothea of Austria, probably believed that she would have been a good match for him, but he was disappointed. It was for a long time that he had been in love with her, and he was disappointed. The Duke's devotion to Mme. # Why I Let Piggie Wear 'Em - by Polaire, the Ugliest Woman on the Stage

By Mlle. POLAIRE,

The Paris Actress Celebrated for Her "Ugliness" and Her Jewels

C'EST VRAI it is true, monsieur. Never is it that I wear these jewels which I have of the value more than one million francs. Those jewels sparkle the neck, the nose, the ears (the small nose) and the large ear of my petite cochon—of my Mimi, my little pig what live with me.

Behold, now, dear! Is it not that I cast my pearl before the swine? Atendez, Mimi! Bon, Monsieur, upon the neck of Mimi you see those pearl necklace of Polaire which cost of your dollar more than one hundred thousand francs. Those pearls kill me with the heat, melt the pig—Mimi find them adorable. You see how she smile? Recipe: to make one pig happy, start four pearl for the neck with one diamond pendant, altogether of the value one hundred thousand francs. For the very grand occasion Mimi have also sixteen large pearl of the value ninety thousand francs. Then, for the nose and the large ear and the feet Mimi you see for yourself—have one on each ear seven diamonds, six bracelets of ruby, diamond and pearl, four rings of diamond and two princess, one duchess and the Comte de Champagne after the theatre to the Cafe la Rue for the little supper. The same as the princess and the duchess, I wear all of the jewels which you see on the neck, the feet and the large ear of my pig, ma petite Mimi. All Paris see what now happen.

Font a coup—all of one suddenness—come to the next table a pig! Vraiment, one pig what call herself "lady." She is more fat as one hundred Mimi, with the costume de coquette—terriblement. And, behold, monsieur, this fat pig what call herself one "lady" have on her neck, her hands, her arms and on her hair the jewel of more value than Polaire and the princess and the duchess altogether! Aha! I feel the fire in my cheek. From my neck, from my finger, from my arm, I take the jewel—the pearl, the diamond, the ruby, everything—and put it in my chapeleine. "Brava" whisper the Comte de Champagne. "Give them to the pig!"

the Rue de la Paix one grand what you call boom! Is it not that all the beau garçon of Paris—the boulevardier, the Russian Grand Duke, les rois en exil—pay the compliment to the great Polaire to say: "Mademoiselle, permit me the honor to place this necklace of pearl about the fat neck of your pig!"

Ma petite Mimi—my sweet little fat pig which wear my jewel—if she not die too young, Polaire one day retire from the stage to keep for herself a shop for the diamond and pearl most grand on the Rue de la Paix!

Polaire and the Toy Pig Employed to Hang Her Pearls and Diamonds on When the Live One Needs Repose.

"Polaire and her Jewelled Pig promenade the Bois de Boulogne."

There, Monsieur, I get my idea. Polaire will find a nice fat pig for wear her jewel of the value one million franc! On the farm of my good friend, Monsieur Sauton, I find him—my petite Mimi. Mimi is two years of the age and more fat as the piece of man of the Cafe la Rue. I say she shall live with me in my apartment. M. Sauton say the pig have not yet acquire the manner of good society, but he engage M. Rossa, trainer of the animal most famous, and M. Rossa educate my pig most complete for the life in the hotel.

In a very few week Mimi have the manner of one perfect lady. She have for herself one bath, one table service complete, one maid for the toilet, and the implements for maintain the table. She have the little carriage which she maid push when Polaire take the air of the Bois. For all Paris it is to laugh and make the loud cheer: "Vive Polaire! Vive Mimi, la petite cochon de Polaire!"

Monsieur, it is for the jewel of

My Secrets of Beauty

No. 229--The Beauty of the Eyes

YOU can't be beautiful unless your eyes are, and if you want beautiful eyes you must not cry. No matter what has happened or how badly you feel, do something else, smother something, do anything, but don't cry. I can never forget the lesson taught me when I saw a little girl by one of the reigning beauties of Paris. She was almost at the end of her beauty, too, but she had a little daughter of about my age when you would remember if I should mention her name. I wanted to see this famous beauty at close range, and persuaded a milliner's girl to let me deliver a hat for her at the beauty's house. Some later disappointment had made the beauty's little daughter burst into tears, her mother was furious, shook her and finally spanked her until at last she stopped the tears. "Do you want to be a homely little girl?" the mother demanded. "Do you want to spoil your eyes?" "But mother," the girl pleaded, "when I feel so badly I just have to cry or else hurt something," and she attempted to kick a kitten that was playing about. To my astonishment the mother said she preferred that her daughter should kill the little animal rather than dim the future sparkle of her eyes by tears. No woman can afford to cry and yet most all of us do. I am sure I don't know why, unless it is because we enjoy it. Men almost never cry and yet they can well afford to for man, fortunate creature, is not afflicted with the complicated, difficult and in the end unsuccessful task of being beautiful. To be beautiful the eye should be long and deep, with a large orbit, long lashes and silky. These are the classic laws. They attributed more energy and ardor to black eyes, more of sweetness and dreaminess to blue eyes, etc. The brilliancy of the eye has much to do with its beauty. Some Japanese eyes, though ill-formed, are most expressive on account of their brightness. Spanish and Circassian women, whose eyes are tapering, too close to the nose, are still considered beautiful on account of their brilliancy. It is the pupil, that little circle through which the rays of light pass which gives vivacity and brilliancy to the eye. The most common method of heightening the effect of the eye is to blacken the eye-lashes, but I warn you against this practice which is most harmful and destroys the harmony of the eye. Sulphur of antimony is used for this purpose, but should be avoided. Another method, even more dangerous, is to increase the brilliancy of the pupil by putting a few drops of cocaine into the eye. It dilates the pupil, but is a baneful habit. The toilet for the eyes is separate from that for the face. They should not be touched with the towel. They must above all not come into contact with toilet waters, soap or other toilet accessories. Hygiene is the main consideration where the eyes are concerned. To wash the eyes use a special bit of cotton, ascertained, and then dipped into boiled water or rose water. Pass the cotton lightly over the eye-lids and the corners of the orbit. Rose water is a real specific for tired eyes. Camomile water is also recommended. But you must be careful that these waters are pure, and filtered. If the eyes are red or irritated, wash them frequently in boracic water (a teaspoonful of boracic acid to a glass of water). Use this water tepid, and, if necessary, put a piece of gauze dipped in the water on each eye. Tie this on with a bandage and keep it on for some time. To avoid inflammation of the eyes do not work in a half-dark room, but with good light, and in the eye is to blacken the eye-lashes, especially electric light, dries the eyes quickly and congests the lids. Do not abuse your eyes or be afraid of wearing tinted glasses in strong sunlight to protect them from the in-

"Wrinkles and crows' feet are formed chiefly by overstrain of the eyes." To Erase Wrinkles and Crows' Feet. As the eyes are so very delicate it is well to massage them with great care. Massage is not only the sole method of effacing the little wrinkles which form around the eyes, but it also helps the muscles around the eye. Use only the ends of the fingers for this massage. Pass around the eye lightly after spreading some fatty body like this: Tannin ..... 1 gramme. Aloes ..... 1 gramme. Brechett's Water ..... 1 gramme. Massage twice a day for five minutes. These wrinkles and crows' feet are formed largely by overstrain of the eye and the natural protection from glare by drawing together your mode of living. At the same time I advise you to use cataplasms of plantain and unguents of oil of myrtle. Lotions of camomile have a good effect, and washing with lettuce water. It is well, too, after the slightly watering to put a little linseed oil or vasoline under the lower lid. One of the best recipes for darkened lids is this: Boiled, distilled water, 1 quart. Cyanide of hydric acid, 1 gramme. Leaves of sweet marjoram and barley, with sweet butter makes a plaster that is excellent for eye-lids. For Swollen Eye-lids—If the eyes are swollen, light massage with the following is to be recommended: Castor Oil ..... 5 grammes. Vaseline ..... 5 grammes. Olive Oil ..... 5 grammes. Tannin ..... 5 grammes. Gallic acid ..... 5 grammes. Rub this in lightly after washing with rose water. The eyes are swollen in the morning frequently when we have not slept well, or when the digestion is not good. Eat light dinners and feed not too highly seasoned. The poultice which form under the eyes are often symptomatic of rheumatic conditions. When these appear avoid all alcoholic drinks. Eat all the vegetables possible, and avoid meats. Let this macerate for fifteen days, then add: Rose water ..... 15 grammes. Brandy ..... 15 grammes. Wash morning and evening with this, dipping bits of cotton in it as you wash.

I TRY to suggest "good times" in both my hats and gowns that will be worn during what I call the "good times" months of July and August. In the charming rose and white costume that I am showing you this week I feel that I have successfully brought out every quality of this kind. Does not this whole costume suggest to you a delightful out-of-doors affair? A garden party held on the grounds of some beautiful country estate?

This is a quaint model, but one that has all the hallmarks of the very latest creations. It is created in an embroidered crepe. The skirt is made in two sections, each edged with a band of rose chiffon, and the hem is also of this fabric. The little overskirt, longer at the hips than in front or back, is edged with the chiffon. And, as you see in the picture, this rose note is reproduced on the bodice. The girle, which has a novel low arrangement and long ends, is of three shades of rose satin.

The piquant little hat is one of the very odd white satin affairs. It is bound with rose satin, and has a large rose set coquettishly on the brim. I am showing you a back view of this so charming costume, as I think that backs are even more important than fronts.

While there is every evidence that August will bring back the large flowered and plumed hat, the small hat is still the popular model. There is so much personality, I think, to the small hat that I shall continue to make them whenever possible.

This little hat has a lavender brim of straw. The hat itself is covered with silk crepe striped in two tones of mauve. The satin band is lavender, with tiny flowers painted on it, and there is just a small bunch of mauve flowers at the right of the brim.

The ever so charming costume in flowered silk that I am sending you bears strong token that the Pompadour will be with us. The high girle and the soft filmy bertha are very beautiful, but as a rule are becoming only to slender figures. The draped overskirt, too, alas, is only charming when worn by those of much slender form.

Let every woman keep well in the front of her mind that she cannot be considered perfectly dressed unless she carries a parasol. I cannot recall a season when parasols, those first aids to the coquette, were more vitally important. The smaller ones are always very much trimmed, and are invariably of lace or net.

I am, however, showing you one that is a combination of net and silk, the upper section being of white silk and the lower of fine net embroidered. Where the two sections join there is a richness of net.

And notice, if you please, the diaphanous gown worn by the wearer of this parasol. It is one of my lighthearted gowns, a symphony in yellow and white. The hat is a big affair of white muller, with a shirred brim, bound with a pale yellow satin.
